But I'm gonna pick it up right where I left off last year: the fit. At 6'7" and 250lbs, I am a big boy and I'm not worried about my basketball jersey riding up, bulging out or looking too tight. I noticed there is a larger size than last year, 11-14. Very nice since my favorite shirt got too small from all the pads I was wearing last year! The regular jersey comes in black (on sale for $25) and white (on sale for $40). The regular size was too big (S: 29-31) and now comes in a generous size small (XS: 31-33). A bad ass new look and I loved the new graphic look. I'm just waiting for the Nike Elite Pro Gold Jersey to come out. I bet it will be a very similar feel and fit. I highly recommend the jerseys from Kit Kat (I've been buying my son's basketball shoes from them for years). The fit is great and the price is reasonable. I'm looking forward to seeing the new Nike Elite Jersey. I've had an interest in the Nike Elite line since 2006, but only now am buying them for myself. I don't have any image of a player in my head, but I can't wait to see the finished product in person. I've bought basketball shoes from the Pro-Am and Elite line since they came out, but I'm curious if they get any updates from Nike. I really like the look and feel of the white jerseys as well. I was a bit wary since it's been awhile since I've been able to buy Nike basketball jerseys, but after watching the video I think it will suit me fine. I'm glad it's come back

According to my sources, the bill is to be voted on by the Texas Senate tomorrow. And if it passes - as it is expected to, following the Republican supermajority in the state Senate - it will then go to Governor Rick Perry for approval. At the time of writing, Texas state officials have revealed little about the details of the Texas omnibus bill regarding abortion (the wording of the law has not been made public, and is being withheld from media scrutiny until the end of next week at the earliest), but sources at the Texas State Legislature have told me that: One of the major elements of this bill is a mandate that at least one-third of all legislation be filed in the subject areas of child health and human services, women's health, mental health, public health, human services reform, family and children, the environment and health, justice, and public safety. This will almost certainly force the Texas legislature to think very carefully about the state's obligations to children and women throughout their entire life span. Also, this law is likely to make it harder to terminate pregnancies caused by fetal anomalies such as severe birth defects. The Daily Telegraph has also reported that, in addition to outlawing abortion on the grounds of sex selection, it will also ban abortions where women are too poor to afford reproductive health services such as abortions, and force many women to carry their pregnancies to term and raise their children on their own, at the expense of their own lives: The measure is a back-up provision that
